The Social Institutions and Gender Index is a measure created by the Organisation for Economic Co-Operation and Development (OECD) to estimate discrimination against women and girls in social institutions.

Of the 179 countries measured, the World average score was 29.1, with OECD member nations average at 15.3. European nations collectively scored the lowest (13.8), with the Americas (20.9), Asia (37), and Africa (39.9) regions increasingly demonstrating discrimination within social institutions.

No global rankings were provided in the analysis.

4 Dimensions were used to measure social institution discrimination in the SIGI:

1. Discrimination in the family;
2. Restricted physical integrity;
3. Restricted access to productive and financial resources;
4. Restricted civil liberties.

Note: England score uses United Kingdom data (includes independent FIFA members Northern Ireland, Scotland, and Wales) in the calculation.
